HIGH SCHOOL STUDENT PROBABLY FATALLY INJURED

FORD HIT BY TRACTION CAR AT ASHVILLE

Two Companions of South Bloomfield Youth Escape With Slight Bruises.

One Ashville hign school student was probably fatally injured and two companions were slightly injured at 12:20 p m, Tuesday when the Ford roadster in which they were riding collided with a southbound Scioto Valley traction car at the first crossing north of Main-st in Ashville.

Donald Nance, 14, of South Bloomfield, suffered a probable fractured skull, internal injuries and shock. The exact extent of his injuries is unknown as the lad is in a semi-conscious condition.

Ralph Roby, 17, and Earl Stonerock, 15, also of South Bloomfield, escaped with slight cuts and bruises. These two boys were able to return to school, where all three were in the junior class, Tuesday afternoon.

TAKING NOON RIDE.

The accident occurred while the boys were taking a noon-hour ride in the roadster owned by Stonerock.

As Stonerock approached the crossing, it is said his attention was diverted by the horn of an auto, driven by Marcellus White, which was approaching from the rear.

According to spectators, the roadster crashed into the front truck of the traction car and Nance was hurled inthe air by the impact, falling on his head on a concrete walk. The roadster was wrecked. The car's truck was damaged.

TAKEN TO HOME.

Nance unconscious when picked up was taken in White's auto to the office of Dr. R. S. Hosler where he was given first aid before being removed to his home. The traction car, which was 15 minutes late arriving in Circleville, was in charge of Walter Corcoran, conductor, and "Pop" Hyson, motorman, both of Chillicothe.

FAIR MODEL IS FOUND IN MURDER CASE

Widely Sought Woman Located in Chicago--Goes to New York With Story.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20—Mrs. Ruth Keyes, blonde artists' model from Chicago, will arrive here sometime today or tomorrow to tell what she knows about the murder of Arnold Rothstein.

What she knows may not be much—she indicated that such was the case before leaving Chicago—but police were jubilant today because even that much progress had been made toward a solution of the mysterious shooting of New York's best known gambler.

If she arrives today, it will be a most timely visit and probably will help the New York police force out of an embarrassing situation. Yesterday Mayor James J. Walker extended his "period of grace" until today after being assured by detectives that an important development was pending.

THREATENS PUBLICITY

Walker has threatened to make the police "publicity admit defeat" unless they solve the Rothstein case by tonight or at least get an important clue.

Rothstein was fatally shot on the night of Nov 14 after he had been summoned to the Park Central hotel, presumably to discuss the settlement of a gambling debt.

Police learned Mrs. Keyes was staying at the hotel on the night of the shooting and that she checked out the next day. They also learned that four men were in the room from which Rothstein emerged wounded. One of them was believed to be George McManus, whose overcoat was found in the room. It is McManus who would be the most valuable witness of all, but search for him has been so fruitless that yesterday police virtually admitted defeat by inviting him to tell his story.

FEDERAL MEN ACTIVE

Meanwhile, federal authorities promised action. They have been investigating the murder in connection with a report that Rothstein was connected with a band of international drug smugglers. Assistant District Attorney Blake revealed that federal agents had two clues and that they might bring about the arrest of the murderer within 24 hours.

E. C. (Titanic) Thompson, who was in the poker game at Jimmy Meehan's apartment the night Rothstein lost more than $300,000, was questioned again, but apparently could furnish no more information about the shooting.

FIRST SNOW VISITS CITY

Sleet and Near Freezing Temperatures Are Reported Throughout Ohio.

Circleville and vicinity was visited with the first snowfall of the year Tuesday morning when enough snow fell to cover the tops of autos parked on the streets for the night.

The mercury dropped to 33 degrees or one degree above freezing, according to Dr H. R. Clarke, local weatherman.

Dr. Clarke reported that .90 of an inch of rainfall during the past few days has raised the river three inches. The river has been exceptionally low and with this raise the river is now only three inches above the zero mark.

Swirling sleet and near freezing temperatures prevailed in the Great Lakes area while snow flurries were general elsewhere.

Several serious traffic accidents in the state attributable to the storm, were recorded.

The storm climaxed a streak of unseasonably weather which made overcoats and even topcoats comfortable.

VALUE SLICED NINE MILLIONS

Chillicothe Is Among Cities Aided In War On Logan Gas Co. Rates.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 20 — The Public Utilities commission today set the appraised valuation of the Logan Gas company, for rate making purposes, at $10,769,077.04 a reduction of $9,730.923 under the valuation claimed by the company.

The ruling in effect, was a severe blow to the gas company which had claimed a valuation of $25,355,144 less $5,255,144 slashed from the $25,000,000 total when the cities of Newark and Chillicothe adopted gas-rate ordinances.

The company's original valuation was $49,221,861 divided as follows:

Ordinance group, or cities which have adopted ordinances fixing rates, $18,829,451.

Non-ordinance group, or cities which will be effected by rate increases the company proposes, based on its valuation, $25,355,144; wholesale group, $6,203,527.

The cities of Newark and Chillicothe adopted rate-making ordinances after the $25,355,144 figure for the non-ordinance group was fixed and both the company and the commission agreed that properties covered by the ordinances adopted by these cities should be removed from the non-ordinance group and included in the ordinance group.

KILLS TAME GEESE; APOLOGIZES, PAYS

Recently a hunter mistook 29 geese belonging to D. L. Miller near Washington C H for wild and fired into the flock, killing a number of the birds and wounding others. The man was a resident of Washington C H and paid for all he had killed or wounded and apologized for the mistake he made.

The morning was very foggy and when the hunter heard a "honk" he thought it was the sound of wild geese and fired into the flock.

HOOVER TAKES REST AS SHIP PLOUGHS SEA

Every Comfort Provided President-elect and Party Aboard Battle Craft

ABOARD U. S. S. MARYLAND Nov. 20—The Maryland, carrying President-elect Herbert Hoover on his good-will tour to South America, headed into semi-tropical seas off the coast of lower California today.

The President-elect and Mrs. Hoover settled themselves to a quiet rest in a temporary battleship city with a population of 1,300, and surrounded by every convenience.

The radio, the movies and a newspaper published aboard prevented any sense of isolation from the land he had just left.

The weather was ideal and the Maryland steamed over a smooth sea at 15 knots

PLANS TO FISH.

Hoover turned his thoughts to deep sea fishing overnight and was eager to try his hand at it. Deep sea fishing is plentiful along the coast of lower California and Hoover recalled that a friend of his once fought a giant marlin for 14 hours in these waters. Hoover himself once fished off the southern point of lower California A recent report of the bureau of fisheries showed that the region is the chief habitat of game fish.

There is no lack of diversion aboard. Hoollywood has supplied the ship with 80 of the latest feature films. The radio brings musical programs from distant United States cities, as well as current news and editorial comment on Hoover's trip. A library of the latest detective fiction, of which the president-elect is fond, is at hand for his convenience.

HOOVER COMFORTABLE.

Filipino mess boys dart back and forth ready to fill every want of Hoover or Mrs. Hoover. The president-elect reads, smokes, walks the deck, chats with friends takes naps and manages to do some work.

A movie program is scheduled for every night. Last night the film, "Three Week-Ends," with Clara Bow and Neill Hamilton, was the feature.

"The Evening Hurricane," a daily newspaper chronicling events aboard and news of interest from ashore, has begun publication.

HUNT MADMAN AS THREE DIE

Man and Wife Attacked In Bed After Trio Is Found Slain Within Week.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 20.—Harold Stribling, 27, and his wife, were attacked as they were sleeping at Carter Lake, a resort near here today. The attack on the Striblings was the fourth within a week. Police believe a madman is responsible.

Three persons have been killed in the attacks. Stribling was severely beaten and it is not believed he will live. Mrs. Stribling was captured and taken to the East Omaha Swamps. She managed to escape and notified police.

The man entered the Stribling home through an unlocked back door Mrs Stribling told police. It was about three in the morning Stribling awakened and grappled with him but after a brief struggle was knocked unconscious.

The first of the mysterious murders was the death Sunday of J. W. Blackman, 75, pioneer expressman who was murdered Sunday.

Late yesterday the bodies of two young women, Mrs Gertrude Resso, 21, and her sister, Miss Creda Brown, 18, were found in the Resso home. Their heads had been crushed.

Waldo Resso a milkwagon driver found the bodies of his wife and sister-in-law. The two children, a 3-year-old boy and a nine-months-old infant were in the house but were not harmed They were too young to understand what had happened but the three-year-old boy told his father:

"Big man beat Mamma."

TESTIMONY WEAVES SHROUD OF BLAME FOR DEAD SEA CAPTAIN

Vestris Investigation Uncovers Strange Actions of Steamer's Master.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20—Four days of testimony have rounded out the story of the Vestris' last voyage and today it appeared that the blame for the disaster might be placed squarely on Capt. William J. Carey, who never will be able to speak in his own defense.

Today, Federal Attorney Charles H. Tuttle will question passengers on the ship that went down off the Virginia Capes a week ago yesterday, carrying 114 persons to death. It is likely that United States Commissioner Francis O'Neill, who is presiding at the federal government's investigation, will hear testimony similar to that which was given on the first day of the hearing.

On the opening day, passengers on the Vestris framed bitter accusations against Carey and the crew of the Lamport & Holt liner.

It seems inevitable that Carey will be set down in maritime history as one of the strangest ship masters who ever stood on the deck of a soggy hull until he sank with his ship. The investigation has brought these facts about this man who supposedly was seasoned in the ways of sea by 40 years of service.

He did not send out an SOS until there was no hope of saving his ship.

He paced the slanting deck of the Vestris, waving aside lifebelts, until the vessel was sucked down into the Atlantic.

He received warning from his chief officer that the Vestris was settling into the sea, but at 4:56 a. m. on the day the Vestris sank he allowed a wireless to be sent to the S. S. Voltaire that "he had nothing to communicate."

Witnesses have sworn that Carey did not have his mind on his job during the last frenzied hours that the Vestris rode the waves. He seemed to be absent-minded, they said; he resented questions and kept his eyes on the horizon as the water crept up over the deck and swished against his feet.

Radiograms introduced as exhibits at the hearing yesterday brought out that the Lamport & Holt line was not delaying the SOS because it wanted to save salvage fees. That rumor, which has been vigorously denied by officials of the line all during the investigation, has been the only reason the world was reluctant to set down a black mark against the name of Capt. Carey.

The radio log of the S. S. Voltaire, produced yesterday, showed that the first intimation the sister ship had that the Vestris was in trouble came at 10:30 a. m. Monday. At that time the Vestris sent this message to the Voltaire:

"Please rush at full speed to our aid immediately."

The wireless evidence introduced showed that the Italian steamship Giorgio Ohlsen was only 35 miles away from the Vestris, that she received the SOS and that, for some unexplained reason, did not go to the aid of the sinking ship.

The only other witness who added anything to the stories already told was Herbert G. Welland, third officer of the Vestris, Welland said he inspected the lifeboats before the Vestris sailed and found them in good condition. He explained that it was natural for them to leak slightly when they were first put into the water, because the seams would be slightly open.

Rain caused most of the water which other witnesses have testified came into the lifeboats, he said.

TWO ORIENT FARM INMATES CAPTURED

Deputy John Ward Arrests Youths After They Stop At Farm For Food.

Two inmates from the Orient state farm who made their getaway from the institution Saturday night were apprehended Monday by John Ward deputy sheriff, on the farm of Edward Clendenen near Darbyville. They were Henry Grosbeck and Robert North.

After their escape from the institution they wandered to the Clendenen farm and asked for something to eat Clendenen called the sheriff's office and informed them two youths whom he believed to be mentally deranged had stopped at his home Ward immediately rushed to the Clendenen home and found the boys a short distance from the house near a creek.

When taken by the deputy the boys were carrying an improvised blackjack and a half of a corn knife as weapons, the deputy said. They were returned to the institution.

APPREHENSION OF RUM RING IS EXPECTED

Students Tell of Wild Parties With Girls On Outskirts of Town.

Revelations of drinking jousts by high school boys and girls had Grove City staggering Tuesday.

Detectives engaged by Franklin-co authorities expected momentarily to arrest one or more bootleggers for selling liquor to students. They have been gathering evidence for several days.

THREE CONFESS

Two freshmen and one sophomore—two of them aged 14 and one 15—disclosed the operation of the liquor ring.

A few days ago these three boys, all under the influence of liquor, returned to school after the noon hour. One of them became so intoxicated he rolled out of his seat and fell to the floor, semi-conscious. The other two became hilarious during the classes and had to be taken in hand.

Immediately the school board began an investigation. The boys were taken into Franklin-co juvenile court and there, under threat of hard punishment, were compelled to bare the whole drinking situation.

TELL OF WILD PARTY

They told about a free-for-all drinking party staged by 15 high school boys and girls outside the city limits several weeks ago. Everyone got more or less drunk, the boys confessed.

They described in detail the shocking conduct of various members of the party during their Bacchanalian orgy.

CHICAGO IS STIRRED

CHICAGO, Nov. 20—Federal, local and school authorities moved today to end the selling of booze to school children, believed to be practiced by a number of places here.

Evidence that saloons, run as ice cream and chile parlors, have been running full blast, was brought out after the killing of William Adomaytie, 18, a student, by Anthony Juskus, proprietor of an ice cream parlor.

E. K. Yellowley, prohibition administrator, detailed a squad of agents to investigate liquor conditions around schools.

William F. Russell, commissioner of police, has ordered district captains to watch all suspected saloons near schools and raid them on first evidence of a sale.

SCHOOL BOARD AROUSED

The school board will take steps to eliminate saloons around schools, Wallace Caldwell, president said.

"Plans now are being formulated to inspect school neighborhoods to prevent recurrence of such an affair as the death of young Adomaytis, Caldwell said.

As the authorities were preparing their drive against the liquor selling places,—coroner's jury held Juskus to the grand jury on a charge of manslaughter.

Three New County Officials To Have Increase In Terms

County clerks in Ohio elected at the Nov. 6 election are very fortunate in that they will receive a year and three months in office more than the previous clerks. Their terms will begin the first Monday in August and continue for a period of three and a third years, according to a bulletin issued by the secretary of state.

Under this new schedule the term of the newly elected county surveyors will terminate at the same time as that of the county clerks. Common pleas court judges will assume office Feb. 9 and serve terms of six years each while the probate judges will begin their terms the same day and serve four years. The elected county commissioners will assume office the first Monday in January and serve four years.

Ferd Pickens, elected clerk of courts, J. H Sweetman county surveyor and E. A. Brown, elected probate judge, are the local officials concerned with the new ruling.

MANY ATTENDED TUBERCULIN CLINIC

Value of Test For Cows Is Explained To 115 At Farmers' Meeting.

Approximately 115 persons gathered at the Saltcreek-twp centralized school building Monday evening to attend the first of a series of meetings conducted by the farm bureau for the purpose of having the cattle of Pickaway-co given the tuberculin test.

H. S. Lewis, county farm bureau agent, was the speaker. An added feature of the program was a moving picture "Out of the Shadows." A similar meeting will be held at the Walnut-twp school building Tuesday evening.

The object of these meetings is to explain to the farmers the importance of tuberculin testing of their herds, and the compensation in the case of reactors.

SUFFERS RELAPSE

Leland Pontius was called to Columbus Monday night, where his wife who is recovering from a recent surgical operation, had a relapse and a sinking spell. The cities of Newark and Chillicothe adopted rate-making ordinances after the $25,355,144 figure for the non-ordinance group was fixed and both the company and the commission agreed that properties covered by the ordinances adopted by these cities should be removed from the non-ordinance group and included in the ordinance group.

KILLS TAME GEESE; APOLOGIZES, PAYS

Recently a hunter mistook 29 geese belonging to D. L. Miller, near Washington C. H., for wild fowl and fired into the flock, killing a number of the birds and wounding others. The man was a resident of Washington C. H. and paid for all he had killed or wounded and apologized for the mistake he made.

The morning was very foggy and when the hunter heard a 'honk" he thought it was the sound of wild geese and fired into the flock.

HOOVER TAKES REST AS SHIP PLOUGHS SEA

Every Comfort Provided President-elect and Party Aboard Battle Craft

ABOARD U. S. S. MARYLAND Nov. 20—The Maryland, carrying President-elect Herbert Hoover on his good-will tour to South America, headed into semi-tropicap seas off the coast of lower Califronia today.

The President-elect and Mrs. Hoover settled themselves to a quiet rest in a temporary battleship city with a population of 1,300, and surrounded by every convenience.

The radio, the movies and a newspaper published aboard prevented any sense of isolation from the land he had just left.

The weather was ideal and the Maryland steamed over a smooth sea at 15 knots.

PLANS TO FISH.

Hoover turned his thoughts to deep sea fishing overnight and was eager to try his hand at it. Deep sea fishing is plentiful along the coast of lower California and Hoover recalled that a friend of his once fought a giant marlin for 14 hours in these waters. Hoover himself once fished off the southern point of lower California. A recent report of the bureau of fisheries showed that the region is the chief habitat of game fish.

There is no lack of diversion aboard. Hoollywood has supplied the ship with 80 of the latest feature films. The radio brings musical programs from distant United States cities, as well as current news and editorial comment on Hoover's trip. A library of the latest detective fiction, of which the president-elect is fond, is at hand for his convenience.

HOOVER COMFORTABLE.

Filipino mess boys dart back and forth ready to fill every want of Hoover or Mrs. Hoover. The president-elect reads, smokes, walks the deck, chats with friends takes naps and manages to do some work.

A movie program is scheduled for every night. Last night the film, "Three Week-Ends," with Clara Bow and Neill Hamilton, was the feature.

"The Evening Hurricane," a daily newspaper chronicling events aboard and news of interest from ashore, has begun publication.

HUNT MADMAN AS THREE DIE

Man and Wife Attacked In Bed After Trio Is Found Slain Within Week.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 20.—Harold Stribling, 27, and his wife, were attacked as they were sleeping at Carter Lake, a resort near here today. The attack on the Striblings was the fourth within a week. Police believe a madman is responsible.

Three persons have been killed in the attacks. Stribling was severely beaten and it is not believed he will live. Mrs. Stribling was captured and taken to the East Omaha Swamps. She managed to escape and notified police.

The man entered the Stribling home through an unlocked back door Mrs. Stribling told police. It was about three in the morning. Stribling awakened and grappled with him but after a brief struggle was knocked unconscious.

The first of the mysterious murders was the death Sunday of J. W. Blackman, 75, pioneer expressman who was murdered Sunday.

Late yesterday the bodies of two young women, Mrs. Gertrude Resso, 21, and her sister, Miss Creda Brown, 18, were found in the Resso home. Their heads had been crushed.

Waldo Resso a milkwagon driver found the bodies of his wife and sister-in-law. The two children, a 3-year-old boy and a nine-months-old infant were in the house but were not harmed. They were too young to understand what had happened but the three-year-old boy told his father:

"Big man beat Mamma."

TESTIMONY WEAVES SHROUD OF BLAME FOR DEAD SEA CAPTAIN

Vestris Investigation Uncovers Strange Actions of Steamer's Master.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Four days of testimony have rounded out the story of the Vestris' last voyage and today it appeared that the blame for the disaster might be placed squarely on Capt. William J. Carey, who never will be able to speak in his own defense.

Today, Federal Attorney Charles H. Tuttle will question passengers on the ship that went down off the Virginia Capes a week ago yesterday, carrying 114 persons to death. It is likely that United States Commissioner Francis O'Neill, who is presiding at the federal government's investigation, will hear testimony similar to that which was given on the first day of the hearing.

On the opening day, passengers on the Vestris framed bitter accusations against Carey and the crew of the Lamport & Holt liner.

It seems inevitable that Carey will be set down in maritime history as one of the strangest ship masters who ever stood on the deck of a soggy hull until he sank with his ship. The investigation has brought these facts about this man who supposedly was seasoned in the ways of sea by 40 years of service.

He did not send out an SOS until there was no hope of saving his ship.

He paced the slanting deck of the Vestris, waving aside lifebelts, until the vessel was sucked down into the Atlantic.

He received warning from his chief officer that the Vestris was settling into the sea, but at 4:56 a. m. on the day the Vestris sank he allowed a wireless to be sent to the S. S. Voltaire that "he had nothing to communicate."

Witnesses have sworn that Carey did not have his mind on his job during the last frenzied hours that the Vestris rode the waves. He seemed to be absent-minded, they said; he resented questions and kept his eyes on the horizon as the water crept up over the deck and swished against his feet.

Radiograms introduced as exhibits at the hearing yesterday brought out that the Lamport & Holt line was not delaying the SOS because it wanted to save salvage fees. That rumor, which has been vigorously denied by officials of the line all during the investigation, has been the only reason the world was reluctant to set down a black mark against the name of Capt. Carey.

The radio log of the S. S. Voltaire, produced yesterday, showed that the first intimation the sister ship had that the Vestris was in trouble came at 10:30 a. m. Monday. At that time the Vestris sent this message to the Voltaire:

"Please rush at full speed to our aid immediately."

The wireless evidence introduced showed that the Italian steamship Giorgio Ohlsen was only 35 miles away from the Vestris, that she received the SOS and that, for some unexplained reason, did not go to the aid of the sinking ship.

The only other witness who added anything to the stories already told was Herbert G. Welland, third officer of the Vestris, Welland said he inspected the lifeboats before the Vestris sailed and found them in good condition. He explained that it was natural for them to leak slightly when they were first put into the water, because the seams would be slightly open.

Rain caused most of the water which other witnesses have testified came into the lifeboats, he said.

TWO ORIENT FARM INMATES CAPTURED

Deputy John Ward Arrests Youths After They Stop At Farm For Food.

Two inmates from the Orient state farm who made their getaway from the institution Saturday night were apprehended Monday by John Ward, deputy sheriff, on the farm of Edward Clendenen near Darbyville. They were Henry Grosbeck and Robert North.

After their escape from the institution they wandered to the Clendenen farm and asked for something to eat. Clendenen called the sheriff's office and informed them two youths whom he believed to be mentally deranged had stopped at his home. Ward immediately rushed to the Clendenen home and found the boys a short distance from the house near a creek.

When taken by the deputy the boys were carrying an improvised blackjack and a half of a corn knife as weapons, the deputy said.

They were returned to the institution.

Three New County Officials To Have Increase In Terms

County clerks in Ohio elected at the Nov. 6 election are very fortunate in that they will receive a year and three months in office more than the previous clerks. Their terms will begin the first Monday in August and continue for a period of three and a third years, according to a bulletin issued by the secretary of state.

Under this new schedule the term of the newly elected county surveyors will terminate at the same time as that of the county clerks. Common pleas court judges will assume office Feb. 9 and serve terms of six years each while the probate judges will begin their terms the same day and serve four years. The elected county commissioners will assume office the first Monday in January and serve four years.

Ferd Pickens, elected clerk of courts, J. H. Sweetman county surveyor and E. A. Brown, elected probate judge, are the local officials concerned with the new ruling.

APPREHENSION OF RUM RING IS EXPECTED

Students Tell of Wild Parties With Girls On Outskirts of Town.

Revelations of drinking jousts by high school boys and girls had Grove City staggering Tuesday.

Detectives engaged by Franklin-co authorities expected momentarily to arrest one or more bootleggers for selling liquor to students. They have been gathering evidence for several days.

THREE CONFESS

Two freshmen and one sophomore—two of them aged 14 and one 15—disclosed the operation of the liquor ring.

A few days ago these three boys, all under the influence of liquor, returned to school after the noon hour. One of them became so intoxicated he rolled out of his seat and fell to the floor, semi-conscious. The other two became hilarious during the classes and had to be taken in hand.

Immediately the school board began an investigation. The boys were taken into Franklin-co juvenile court and there, under threat of hard punishment, were compelled to bare the whole drinking situation.

TELL OF WILD PARTY

They told about a free-for-all drinking party staged by 15 high school boys and girls outside the city limits several weeks ago. Everyone got more or less drunk, the boys confessed.

They described in detail the shocking conduct of various members of the party during their Bacchanalian orgy.

CHICAGO IS STIRRED

CHICAGO, Nov. 20—Federal, local and school authorities moved today to end the selling of booze to school children, believed to be practiced by a number of places here.

Evidence that saloons, run as ice cream and chile parlors, have been running full blast, was brought out after the killing of William Adomaytie, 18, a student, by Anthony Juskus, proprietor of an ice cream parlor.

E. K. Yellowley, prohibition administrator, detailed a squad of agents to investigate liquor conditions around schools.

William F. Russell, commissioner of police, has ordered district captains to watch all suspected saloons near schools and raid them on first evidence of a sale.

SCHOOL BOARD AROUSED

The school board will take steps to eliminate saloons around schools, Wallace Caldwell, president said.

"Plans now are being formulated to inspect school neighborhoods to prevent recurrence of such an affair as the death of young Adomaytis, Caldwell said.

As the authorities were preparing their drive against the liquor selling places,—coroner's jury held Juskus to the grand jury on a charge of manslaughter.

MANY ATTENDED TUBERCULIN CLINIC

Value of Test For Cows Is Explained To 115 At Farmers' Meeting.

Approximately 115 persons gathered at the Saltcreek-twp centralized school building Monday evening to attend the first of a series of meetings conducted by the farm bureau for the purpose of having the cattle of Pickaway-co given the tuberculin test.

H. S. Lewis, county farm bureau agent, was the speaker. An added feature of the program was a moving picture "Out of the Shadows." A similar meeting will be held at the Walnut-twp school building Tuesday evening.

The object of these meetings is to explain to the farmers the importance of tuberculin testing of their herds, and the compensation in the case of reactors.

SUFFERS RELAPSE

Leland Pontius was called to Columbus Monday night, where his wife who is recovering from a recent surgical operation, had a relapse and a sinking spell. She is at the home of her mother Mrs. Fanny Stage. A nurse is again in charge of Mrs. Pontius, who was reported to be a little better Tuesday morning.

BIBLE THOUGHT

GOD NEVER FAILS— Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee.— Isa. 49:14 and 15.

PRAYER — "God gently calls us every day Why should we then our bliss delay?"

AL SMITH'S INFLUENCE

Alfred E. Smith took about as bad a beating as any major party candidate for the presidency could well take. In all human probability his crushing defeat removes him permanently from further political consideration.

That being the case, we might as well take the time now to look at two things which this man, overwhelmingly beaten, did for us.

First and foremost—he gave us Herbert Hoover for president.

That may seem a strong statement. But let your mind roam back to the pre-convention days of last May and June and see if you don't agree.

Herbert Hoover was, by all odds the strongest man his party could have presented. Indeed, his very strength hampered him in the fight for the nomination. The political big-wage sauddered at the mere thought of nominating him. They would vastly have preferred to name a compalisant second-rater. To the very last they held out against him, hoping against hope that they could slip over a man who would be more docile in the White House—a man who, in the political phrase, would "play ball," a man who could be counted on to stay hitched and have no dangerous ideas of his own.

But the shadow of Al Smith fell across their path. They knew Smith would be nominated by the Democrats; and they knew that no second-rater could hope to beat him. Much as they disliked it, they were forced to name their ablest man. To Al Smith must go the credit for forcing Hoover's nomination.

Nor is that all this defeated candidate did.

For years we have been worried about the comparative lightness of the vote in presidential elections. This year the vote broke all records. Not in many decades has such a large percentage of the electorate gone to the polls. And the man responsible, again is—Al Smith.

Quite a book could be written on the way in which our defeated candidates have influenced us.

William Jennings Bryan was three times defeated for the pres-

The saltcreek teams received of the pioneer measures he championed become laws. The direct election of senators, direct primaries, prohibition, woman suffrage—Bryan left his stamp on the country even if actual victory never was his.

The late Senator La Follette had a similar record. Repeatedly his party rejected him. In his one race for the presidency he ran a hopeless third. Yet many and many a measure that he was once hooted at for sponsoring is now accepted as the law of the land. Republican platforms recently have contained many planks that were first proposed, years ago, by Robert La Follette.

The victor is the man of the hour. Herbert Hoover is to be our ruler for the next four years. But, in his hour of triumph, we might keep in mind the things we owe to the man we rejected—Al Smith

"Oh, Julius Caesar, thou art mighty yet . . . "

DEMAND BALLOT.

Residents of the District of Columbia are working for constitutional amendment which will give them the right of suffrage, as they have no vote now in municipal or national affairs, unless they vote in the states from which they came. It is claimed that the 500,000 inhabitants of the district should not be denied this fundamental American privilege.

Objection will be made that these citizens consist largely of office holders and their friends, who would be apt to follow the party in power whichever it was. But it seems hardly right under our American principles to deny so large a portion of American citizens the right to vote in the place of their residence The office holders of the various states are not denied this privilege

EVENSONG

There was a time when sandwiches
Were priced at half a dime,
And bacon was ten cents a pound
Back in that gladsome time.

There was a time thick, juicy steaks
Cost only fifteen cents,
And the butcher passed out liver with
No thought of recompense.

There was a time when men got turks
Without much hard endeavor-r,
But, lissen, son, them days have gone—
Them days have go-o-o-o-o-ne
For e-v-v-v-v-v-v-er.

Faddists have been making some experiments in food, have been grading it according to nutrition, attractiveness, taste and so on. While the completed report has not yet been made public. One is that red ants are palatable and highly nutritious.

We assume that the scientists have taken as a base line, or zero, the angle food cake. Certainly this food, if food it may be called, stands at the very bottom of the list. It is wholly without taste, which is perhaps in its favor. Or if it may be said to have taste, the taste resembles fog coming off the lake just before dawn. If this were all, if it were merely tasteless there would be no very great complaint Mushrooms have no taste, except a flavor vaguely resembling wet overshoes, and egg plant, except for the likeness to old blotting paper, is in the same class. But angel food cake is not only tasteless, it is tough. It is like trying to eat a rubber bath sponge when one has a heavy cold. But we were talking about red ants.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Any time this thought seems to be bogging down you are at perfect liberty to read something else It can't seem any duller to you than it does to us).

We were talking about ants—red ants. The authorities report that they have a piquant and delightful flavor and form a very beneficial food.

Well, people will try anything They will, and do, eat parsnips and carrots and other curious horse food. They eat puff balls. By Thanksgiving day ants—red ants— will most certainly form the basis of many a menu

The authority says nothing about the method of preparation. Roasted, perhaps, but it would be a delicate job to carve a roasted ant properly. Perhaps on toast, like white bait. Anyway, here is the perfect Thanksgiving menu:

Parsnip Soup
Carrots Puffballs
Roasted Ants
Angel Food Cake

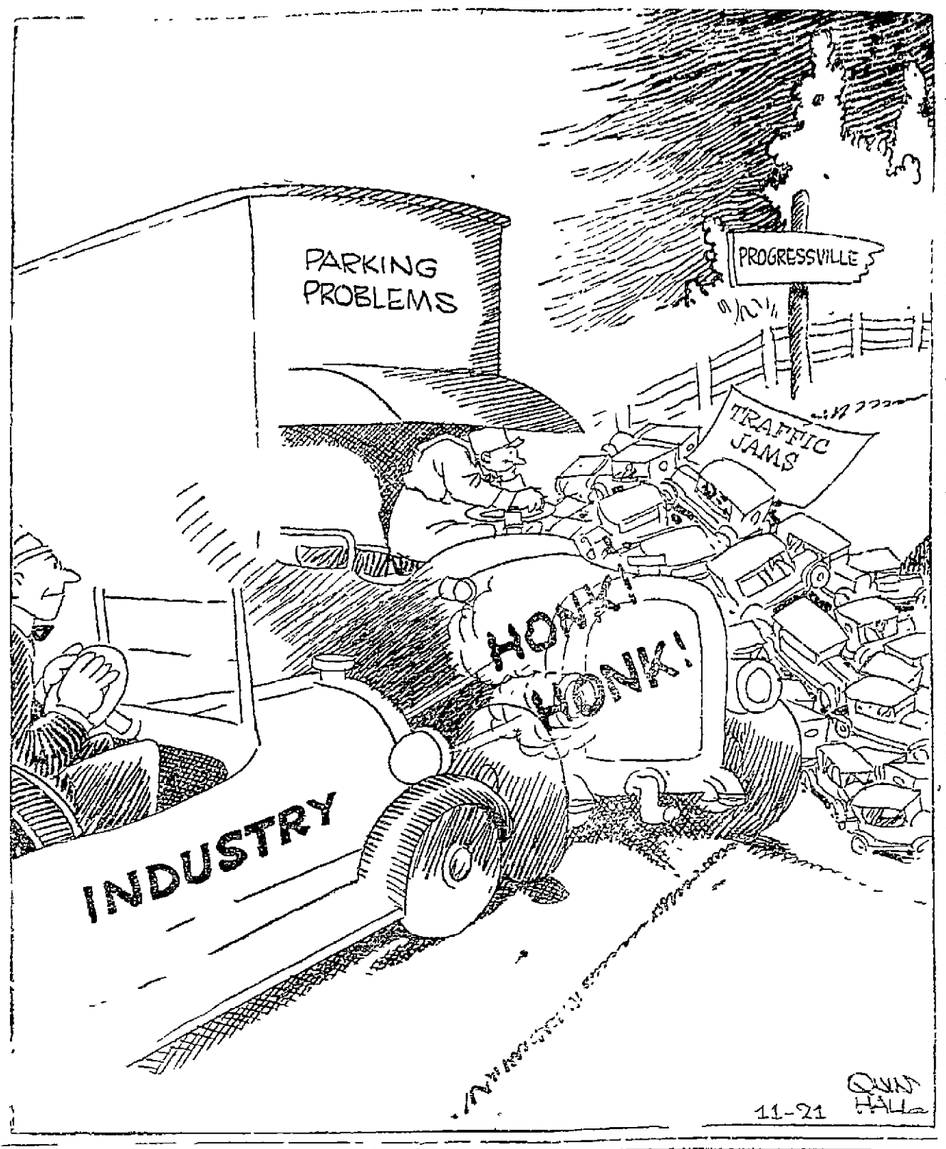
'STYMIED'



Peaks of Desire

by Kane O Day

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

JERRY DUNN, star reporter on a large newspaper, covers a garden fete given by Spencer Hayden, a millionaire. There he meets Ann Tremaine, debutante daughter of a wealthy banker, who is engaged to marry Hector Richards, whom she does not love. She becomes interested in Dunn, who is different from the men she has always known, and when he asks her to direct him to Mr Hayden, she pretends she is a working girl and has crashed the party. He invites her to a speakeasy, but she refuses the invitation. Later, she is so impressed by the ideas he propounds, that she decides to leave the party and go anywhere with him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER IV.

WHEN they had found their way out by a side gate, Ann was walking in a dream, conscious of nothing but that she was escaping, somehow, from a life that had been stifling her.

But it wasn't escape—not actually. She could only go a little way, like a prisoner on a short chain. With Jerry Dunn she could walk only to the end of her leash—in a little while she would be drawn back to her old life

She was still shaken from the storm of self-pity that had swept her. There was mystery in it, too, for she could not understand how such a casual incident on meeting—and flirting a bit with—a strange man had brought all her pent up dissatisfaction in life to a sharp focus. The contact of his personality had been almost like a shock from an electric wire, stimulating her into a state of mind sensitively alert to the fact that she was drifting away from all that was keen and interesting in life.

Dimly, she had been unhappy and bored for a long time but tonight it had all crowded up in her heart with a tide of unbearable anguish

What she did realize perfectly was that any outsider would think she had lost her mind if she complained of her lot. A hundred times she had been told that her life was "a bed of roses." She had no more actual cares than a child, and anything that money, in reason, could buy was hers for the asking. And tonight she felt as if it were all killing her.

"Where are you taking me?" she asked, with a trace of dissatisfaction. Nothing, she felt, could possibly please her—not even the mildly fascinating man at her side.

"I still think we ought to get a taxi and go for a long ride. An hour or two shut off from the rest of the world on a desert isle—a desert isle on wheels."

But his fancy did not please her. They were now walking along the wide boulevard where borders of grass parking, planted with trees, edged the moving stream of Summer evening pleasure drivers. Here and there were benches occupied by young men and women who could not afford even the cheapest kind of car One bench they passed was unoccupied.

"Here." Ann selected the bench as their destination. "Let's just sit down here—it's so much simpler."

"As you please And now?"

She smiled at him, but was unconscious that there was something wistful in it. "This is enough, isn't it?"

"Just to sit here and watch the cars go by? Yes, I suppose so—if you like it. Any place that suits you is O. K. with me if you want to confess."

"Confess?"

"Of course. There's something on your mind and it's burning you up. A girl doesn't say she expects to go to hell unless she's pretty close there already. Not a girl of your type, anyway. You're odd. I can't make out why you wanted to crash the gate at Hayden's fete tonight. People who do things like that are usually as vulgar and simple-minded as the invited guests. There's something on your mind and I think it would do you good to spill it."

What was it about him that was different from the other men she knew—her set? What was the attraction?

She was secretly somewhat afraid of him. Fear throbbed a little in her breast because she knew there was a disturbing power in him that filled her thoughts with anarchy. He made her want to run away, to do something desperate. Nor was this because of anything he said—it just rose up inside her, like a fever. Perhaps their paths had happened to cross at a time when she was susceptible, when some emanation from his personality reached and infected her discontent.

She had never before felt any acute fear that she might rise up and rebel against drifting along with the golden current of her social life. Now it seemed entirely possible and a diluted kind of terror shook her. She shivered

"Are you cold?" Jerry Dunn asked her.

"No . . . just thinking. What makes you think there's something on my mind worrying me?"

"It shows all over you," he assured her. "You're under some kind of a strain. If you told me about it, I might be able to help you. How about giving me a shot at it?"

"You're entirely mistaken," she said, defensively, because she was not ready now, might never be, to reveal her innermost thoughts to this man

"Covering up, eh? Well, have it your own way." He opened a pack of cigarettes and she accepted one. "Silly party we just left, wasn't it? Silly people, too."

She studied him covertly. Back of his brownish eyes was a curtain that shut her off from his real nature! she had an impression that he thought very little about himself at all, that his mind was given over to theories, abstract ideas—

"Why do you say those people we just left are silly?" she asked. "Some of them might be charming."

"The dullest charming people, they work so hard at it," he grumbled. "I'll tell you why those people seem silly to me—they're all going around being painfully polite and nonchalant and superior. Maybe some of them work but they put in all their spare time going after gentility, society stuff. And that's the bunk. They don't know it but they're really trying to ape in their crude ways the fops and their ladies of the old French court. If they carried their efforts out to the logical conclusion they'd all be as rotten and useless as the perfumed gang that used to hang around Louis the Fourteenth."

"But the other extreme," Ann protested "would make them ignorant bores."

He emitted a cloud of smoke and shook his head.

"You just don't know. Mark this well, because it's been true in all history; the only people who get anything out of life are the lads that are down in the mob struggling and fighting to accomplish something. They're the real people. The guys with the wolf of poverty snapping at their heels. Any time anything worth while in this world is accomplished it's been because somebody was trying to build up and push through. That mob back there at Hayden's is on the downgrade. They don't know it, but it's true."

"I shouldn't think it would be much fun to be poor." Ann mused

"It's not—the fun comes in the struggle the under dog has trying to be top dog. That's where all the kick and thrill is—in the struggle But soon as he gets on top . . ." Jerry Dunn shrugged his shoulders. "You saw the answer back there tonight. A bunch of top dogs trying to kid themselves into believing they're having a good time. But they're really bored to death and they're give their ears, any of them, for something real to come along and jolt them wide awake—the poor fish."

What he said bit into her mind like acid . . .

Court News

FILES DIVORCE ACTION

Grant E. McKinley has filed a petition in common pleas court for a divorce from Estella Bass McKinley on the grounds of gross neglect.

The couple were married in Cleveland Nov. 15, 1924, but the husband is now a resident of Pickaway-co. The plaintiff charges the defendant with being wilfully absent for more than three years. Charles Dresbach represents the plaintiff.

SON IS DEFENDANT.

Alice L. Riegel, widow of Harry R. Riegel, has filed suit in common pleas court against Sol D. Riegel Jr., her son, a minor under 14 years of age, for dower and partition. Sol D. Riegel Jr., is the heir of Harry R. Riegel who died March 20, 1928, leaving two lots in Circleville Nos. 1468 and 1469. The property is now claimed by the defendant. The plaintiff prays that her dower be assigned to her and for such other relief as is proper.

PARTITION SOUGHT.

Alice L. Riegel, as guardian for her son, Sol D. Riegel Jr., has filed suit in common pleas court against Bertha M. Koch, of Columbus, Grace R Swinehart, of Baltimore, Md., and Bessie R. Clark, of Circleville, for dower and partition.

Sol D. Riegel Jr., is the only heir of Harry R. Riegel, deceased, and of the undivided one-fourth part of five tracks of land located in Pickaway-twp. One fourth of the land belongs to Bertha Koch, Grace Swinehart and Bessie Clark. The plaintiff as guardian desires that this part be set off to her son.

H. B. Weaver represents the plaintiff.

SUPPORT ORDERED.

Raymond Gray, of Chillicothe, was ordered by Common Pleas Judge Curtain Tuesday morning to pay $4 a week for the support of his two illegitimate children, Loram and Lillian, aged about 2 1-2 years, at the Children's Home. He was also ordered to pay a doctor bill of $50 and to give bond for $500.

This was the first criminal case on indictments returned by the October grand jury.

The other of the children, ac- to the clerk's office is R ottrill, of Kingston.

SALTCREEK SCHOOL

The senior class of Saltcreek-twp recently visited the Baker Art gallery at Columbus to have their pictures taken. The remainder of their time was spent visiting various points of interest in Columbus.

The Saltcreek-twp Parent Teachers' association will sponsor a poster contest for the Farmers' Institute this year. Details will be made known in the near future.

The science department of the Saltcreek-twp school has added some new equipment which greatly aids the training of students in these classes. The library has been completely re-arranged and re-catalogued and is now ready for the addition of new books.

ELECTION OF CHICAGOAN TO AID PROPOSAL

Peace and Harmony Established Between Colleges and Amateur Factions

NEW YORK, Nov. 20— Peace and harmony existed today between the college and amateur factions of the Amateur Athletic union as the fortieth annual convention went into its final day at the Waldorf Astoria hotel.

With Avery Brundage, 38-year old Chicago contractor, salted to succeed Murray Hulbert, of New York, who is now closing his fourth term as president, the Western conference, which has long been at odds with the A. A. U., was expected to be drawn closer to the amateur body.

A serious internal clash was narrowly averted in the opening day's session between the college faction, led by Gustavus T. Kirby, past president of the A. A. U., on behalf of eastern colleges, and amateur athletic leaders, championed by L. Di Benedetto of New Orleans.

RESOLUTION PASSED.

Kirby's resolution to permit a college or university maintaining a proper system of amateur standards to certify the amateur status of its athletes for A. A. U., competition was passed only after two defeats and two revisions.

The amateur leaders objected to the resolution on the ground that professionalism might creep into the ranks of the A. A. U., pointing out that many colleges allowed their athletes to play semi-pro baseball in the summer and receive as high as $150 a month and still retain their amateur standing for intercollegiate athletics.

With the resignation of college athletes now accepted through the colleges by the A. A. U., the way has been cleared for closer relations between the A. A. U., and the National Collegiate A. A., which had quarreled with the former body on this point.

It was even rumored that the Big Ten, the foremost conference in the National Collegiate A. A., might be induced to join the A. A. U. Only Iowa university of the Big Ten conference is now a member of the A. A. U., with Brundage as president, it was said the A. A. U., might launch a campaign to bring the Big Ten into the fold.

RECORDS APPROVED.

Several outstanding records were approved including Sabin Carr's indoor pole vault of 14 feet, one inch; Emerson Spencer's time of 47 seconds for the 400 metres; De Hart Hubbard's time of 9 3-5 seconds for the 100 yards and Lloyd Hahn's 1:51 2-5 for the 880-yard indoors.

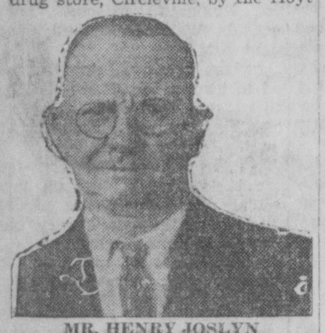
Eleven track and field records were rejected. Among those turned down were Lee Barnes' application for a mark of 14 feet, 1 1-2 inches in the pole vault; Frank Hussey's application of 6 4-5 seconds for 70 yards; and Charley Paddock's application for a record at the odd distance of 175 yards. Hussey's mark was discredited because it was believed humanly impossible to run 70 yards in 6 4-5 seconds. Louis N. Goldsmith, chairman of the record committee, pointed out that at the rate Hussey was running he would have covered 100 yards in less than nine seconds.

THE BEARS' END MAN

Hoyt's Compound Made Him Different

THIS MAN RELIEVED OF NERVOUSNESS, CONSTIPATION, INDIGESTION AND RUN-DOWN CONDITION.

Mr. Henry Joslyn, 503 East Second street, Chillicothe, who is employed as motorman on the local railway is still another widely known person to publicly endorse Hoyt's Compound the great natural mixture of roots and herbs now being introduced daily at Wilder's drug store, Circleville, by the Hoyt man in person. Mr. Joslyn has been employed for sometime by the local railway and is widely acquainted in Chillicothe and surrounding towns. He says "I sure obtained great results from Hoyt's Compound. I was troubled continually with indigestion and my system was entirely rundown. Couldn't sleep at nights and consequently was all tired and worn out the following day. I was continually troubled with constipation and always had to be taking something for this condition. I can heartily say that Hoyt's Compound has built me up until I feel a DIFFERENT MAN. By bowels are regulated I rest good at night and I no longer am troubled with nervousness. My wife was also in a rundown and nervous condition and has been greatly benefitted by the use of this great medicine. On the strength of what Hoyt's great blood, stomach and system builder has done for both by wife and myself I heartily recommend it to those who suffered as we did as being the greatest of all medicines that we have ever tried."



MR. HENRY JOSLYN

A preparation MUST HAVE MERIT in order to get these local people who have been born and reared in Ross County to praise it in this manner.

The Hoyt man is in person at Wilder's drug store, Circleville, explaining the merits of this great medicine

ARCHIE CENTER OF PROHIBITION FUSS

LONDON, Nov. 20. — Archie Compston, British professional golfer, has aroused a storm of controversy over his recent statement that the success of United States golfers is due to prohibition.

One person asked why, if prohibition was the "open sesame" to athletic prowess, that the United States only took one first place in the Olympic races—Ray Barbuti, in the quarter mile.

Others said that Barbuti's victory had its own special interest in view of Compston's statement because, they said, prior to the race, Barbuti gulped down a glass of sherry and egg. This brought Barbuti's victory, they argued.

A moral was pointed out in the case of the Oxford and Cambridge crews, the fastest in the world, whose training diet includes rations of beer. Similarly, it was said, beer is not banned to the Britains who play on the numerous rugby teams.

BAR MITCHELL IN STRIBLING FIGHT

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Andy Mitchell, California heavyweight, will not fight Young Stribling in the feature bout at Madison Square Garden Friday night.

The New York boxing commission yesterday refused to sanction the fight, ruling that Mitchell was not ready for a fight with the southerner.

Unable to find a substitute for Mitchell, Garden officials selected Harry Ebbets and K. O. Phil Kaplan, middelweights, as opponents in the main bout.

(United Press Sports Writer)

Tris Speaker will not wear a major league uniform next season for the first time in 22 years.

Unconditionally released by Connie Mack after a year with the Philadelphia Athletics, Speaker has signed a two-year contract to manage the Newark club of the International League.

Succeeding Walter Johnson at the helm of the Newark Bears, Speaker hopes to trace Johnson's footsteps back into the major leagues as a manager. After one year at Newark, Johnson was signed to manage the Washington Senators next season.

Barney came back, Speaker said after he signed a contract. "Perhaps I will prove I can come back too."

Speaker managed the Cleveland Indians for seven full seasons and part of another, having relieved Lee Fohl as manager in midseason of 1919. Under Speaker the Indians won the first and only American League pennant ever won by Cleveland, in 1920. In the world series that year the Indians gained the world championship by defeating the Brooklyn Robins. Speaker resigned as manager of the Indians Nov. 29, 1926.

TO PLAY IN CENTER

As a minor league manager, Speaker will receive the largest salary ever paid a manager outside of the major leagues—a sum said to be $20,000 per season. When he was a star player with the Indians Speaker's salary was only $18,000 a year.

Speaker will be player-manager of the club and will take his place regularly in center field. Although Speaker realizes his playing days as a major leaguer are over, he still believes he is good enough to play regularly in the International League.

"No man ever likes to admit he's through," Speaker said. "While I'm going to the minors I still think I have a lot of good baseball left in me. I plan to play center field regularly. If some player shows he can beat me out of the job I'll direct the team from the bench, and appear only in utility roles."

John McGraw was instrumental in landing Speaker for the Newark club. Paul Block, Newark publisher and owner of the club, asked McGraw to recommend a manager to replace Johnson who recently signed to manage the Washington club. McGraw urged Block to sign Speaker.

IN MAJORS 21 YEARS

Speaker's major league career stretched over 21 seasons with the Red Sox, Indians, Senators and Athletics. The Red Sox bought him from the Houston Texas League club in 1907 for $400. The next spring the Red Sox trained at Little Rock, Ark., and in compensation for using the Little Rock ball park Boston club turned Speaker over to Little Rock. In 1908 he was back with Boston and remained with the Red Sox until 1916 when Cleveland purchased him for $50,000 and two players. He stayed at Cleveland for 11 years until he was given his unconditional release in February, 1927, after he had been cleared of charges of conspiring to throw a game.

He was with Washington in 1927 and Philadelphia last year, spending most of the past season on the bench along with Ty Cobb.

Through the season of 1927, Speaker has a lifetime batting average of .348, exceeded by only three players, Ty Cobb, Rogers Hornsby and Joe Jackson.

Despite his great batting record in batting only one time when he defeated Cobb and Jackson in a Speaker led the American League three-cornered battle in 1916. Speaker's average that year was .386.

EBY RETURNS TO PRACTICE TODAY

Star Ohio State Halfback, Injured In Auto Accident, Recovers Rapidly.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 20.—Byron Eby, star Ohio State university halfback, who was injured in an automobile accident between Chillicothe and Circleville, will report for practice with the varsity this afternoon.

Eby, although scratched and bruised, was scheduled to report for practice late yesterday but at the last moment Coach J. W. Wilce decided he had better spend the day taking it easy.

Eby was in good condition this morning and said he felt fit. He was treated at university hospital.

All other members of the first string team turned out yesterday and began their last week of football practice.

On Saturday the Scarlet and Gray meets Illinois in a game which may go a long way towards deciding the Big Ten championship or at least whether Ohio State will tie for the crown.

Two results are possible.

If Minnesota beats Wisconsin and Michigan beats Iowa and Ohio State beats Illinois, Ohio will win the title.

If Illinois and Ohio and Michigan and Iowa play ties and Minnesota beats Wisconsin, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa and Wisconsin will go into a four-way deadlock for first place.

APPOINTED JUDGE ON ASSASSIN'S DAY

URBANA, O., Nov. 20.—Judge Evan P. Middleton, for a quarter of a century Champaign county's common pleas judge, not only recalls his recent defeat at the November 6 election but he also has a vivid recollection of his appointment to the bench.

Judge Middleton was elevated to the bench by Governor George K. Nash the day that President McKinley was assassinated—December 5, 1901. He was the only Champaign county Republican to go down to defeat in the landslide in which the county went Republican by nearly 3 to 1.

Judge Middleton's successor is Lowell Bodey, Urbana city solicitor.

C. B. Heiserman, solicitor and vice president of the Pennsylvania railroad, was Judge Middleton's predecessor on the Champaign county bench. Judge Heiserman now lives in Philadelphia.

STEAK STYLES REVEALED AT STOCK SHOW

Kansas City Show to Echo Disfavor of Big Porterhouse and Sirloins.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 19.—Fashions in beefsteak for 1931 are the thought of cattlemen at the auction sales of pure-bred breeding stock at the American Royal Livestock show here this week.

The show this year is the climax of the middle West fair circuit, consisting of fourteen state fairs and expositions. Cattlemen have gathered from all over the United States, many bringing their purebred breeding stock with them to compete for the prize money.

Approximately $30,000 will be awarded exhibitors in the beef and dairy cattle classes and about $29,000 will go to the horse show and exhibits of draft animals. In addition, prizes aggregating more than $5,000 will be offered swine exhibitors and an additional $5,000 to sheep raisers. Members of the 4-H clubs and vocational agricultural high schools will be offered about $7,000 in trophies, medals and cash for livestock judging and other activities.

SALE SCHEDULED

Of special interest to cattlemen is the sale of the cattle at the show on Nov. 22, when about 200 head of purebred Hereford, Shorthorn and Aberdeen Angus bulls, cows and "baby beeves" in addition to carloads of fat and feeder cattle, will be auctioned off. Many breeders attend the sales because of the large selection and also to buy the type of cattle that will produce the kind of beef in demand.

Housewives nowadays want small, tender, "juicy" beefsteaks instead of the big tenderloins and sirloins that formerly were in demand, cattlemen say. And so they will supply the "baby" beef as demanded.

Outstanding in the series of auctions will be the sale of baby beeves fed by boys and girls who are members of 4-H clubs or students in vocational agricultural high schools. This sale will be held Nov. 23, along with the sale of fat steers in the open classes.

SPECIAL FARES

Special reduced round trip passenger rates of a fare and a third on all railroads will be in effect for the sales. The territory from which this low rate will apply this year includes all points in Wisconsin, Illinois, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Wyoming, Utah, Iowa, Nebraska, Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas and New Mexico. The rate is effective in Idaho on the Oregon Short line and in Old Mexico on the lines of the National Highways of Mexico.

How to Play BRIDGE

Series 1928-29 by Wynne Ferguson

Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

Copyright 1928, by Hoyle, Jr.

ARTICLE No. 12

As an interesting comparison with the home talent, here is a hand just played by one of the great English players at the Portland Club in London. As an example of strategy, clever insight into an opponent's mental processes and of doing the right thing at the right time, it is entitled to rank with the best.

Example Hand No. 1

	Hearts — 5, 3 Clubs — A, 9, 8, 7, 5, 2 Diamonds — Q, 6, 5 Spades — Q, 3
Hearts — A, Q, 2 Clubs — 10, 3 Diamonds — 8, 4, 3, 2 Spades — 10, 9, 7, 2	Y A B Z	Hearts — 10, 9, 8, 4 Clubs — 6, 4 Diamonds — A, 10, Spades — K, J, 6, 4
	Hearts — K, J, 7, 6 Clubs — K, Q, J Diamonds — K, J, 7 Spades — A, 8, 5

No score, rubber game. Z dealt, bid one no trump and all passed. A opened the deuce of spades, Y played the queen, B played the king and Z won the trick with the Ace.

Here is where Z rose to the occasion like a true champion. The only way for him to go game was by creating an impression in his opponents' minds that he required a re-entry for his club suit. To accomplish this result, he led the king and then the queen of clubs and, as both A and B followed suit, neither was aware that the other was then void of clubs.

Having established the impression that he desired, that is, that he had no more clubs, Z made that impression a certainty by leading the king of diamonds as if in the hope that the opponents, by playing the ace, would establish dummy's queen of diamonds as a re-entry for the clubs. B, who was a very good player, was completely fooled by Z's strategy and refused to win the king of diamonds. Z now led the jack of diamonds and B, still under the spell of Z's clever play, again refused to play the ace.

Z had now accomplished his object, so he led the jack of clubs, overtook in Y's hand with the ace, and led the balance of the clubs. In this way he won game and rubber, scoring six clubs, two diamonds, and one spade trick. It was exceptional play by Z and particularly clever in that B had no possible way of detecting the strategy. Remember that all the hands were concealed except Y's, so that B had no way of knowing that A held the ace queen of hearts.

It is exceptional plays of this character that make Auction Bridge such a wonderful game and a source of constant delight, not only to the expert, but to all classes of players, good, bad or indifferent. A hand that is finely played or bid is just as much a masterpiece as a work of art and carries just as much appeal.

In the preceding article two hands were given as examples of the value of bidding the longer suit first, even though it be a minor, where the hand contains two or more suits, each of which is a justifiable original bid. Here is another hand that offers the same problem:

Example Hand No. 2

	Hearts — K, J, 6, 4, 2 Clubs — Q, 7, 6 Diamonds — 10, 5, 3 Spades — J, 3
	Y A B Z
	Hearts — A, Q, 9, 3 Clubs — none Diamonds — A, Q, 7, 6, 4 Spades — A, K, Q, 4

No score, rubber game. What should Z, as dealer, bid with the foregoing hand? According to the theory set forth in the previous article, one diamond is the correct bid. In this particular hand a no trump bid, with a missing club suit, would be very unsound. But there is also the choice of a spade or a heart bid, even though each suit is one of four cards. The objection to either of these bids, however, is that partner is very apt to leave in a major suit bid.

On the other hand, the bid of a diamond with this hand is almost certain to produce further bidding. If A passes, Y should bid one heart and Y Z will make a grand slam. If Z should bid one spade, many players would pass and let Z play the hand. Y should, of course, bid two hearts over a spade bid and, if he did, the result would be the same.

Note the play of the hand at spades. The only way Z can make game at spades, with a club opening, is to discard diamonds on the first three rounds of clubs. If he makes the mistake of trumping one club trick, he cannot make game. This shows the value of bidding the longer of two suits.

Problem No. 15

	Hearts — none Clubs — 6, 5 Diamonds — 7, 4 Spades — 9, 7, 6, 3
Hearts — K Clubs — K, Q, J Diamonds — Q, J, 10, 9 Spades — none	Y A B Z	Hearts — Q, 6, 5, 4 Clubs — 10, 7 Diamonds — 8, 3 Spades — none
	Hearts — A, 10, 7, 3 Clubs — A, 4 Diamonds — K, 5 Spades — none

Spades are trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y Z win all the tricks against any defense? Solution in the next article.

TIME ARRIVES TO OVERHAUL AUTOS

Gordon Says Cars Should Be Carefully Inspected After Summer's Work.

"After the automobile has taken us over the highways for our summer tours, it is ready for quite a bit of attention," states Ben Gordon of Gordon Tire & Accessory Co., local Dayton Thorobred tire distributors. "Most likely it isn't the same car that left the garage before the trip. It's dusty and grimy. The engine knocks a little. The riding is hard. The motor sputters and misses.

"This is to be expected after a car has been driven at a fast speed, hour after hour and day after day. On the average, the modern motor, though greatly improved, will not stand such grueling work without ill effects. Therefore, when it is put under a strain it requires tuning up in order to maintain its efficiency and lengthen its life.

"First comes the engine. The carbon should be removed and it may be necessary to have the valves ground in order that they seat themselves properly, giving maximum power. The spark plugs should be cleaned and the breaker points in the distributor scraped to be sure of good contact in the ignition.

"The cylinder head should be tightened down and the fan belt tightened. The carburetor might need adjustment. The battery most likely needs filling and the terminals cleaned.

"Then the tires should be inflated to proper pressure. Though your tires be low air pressure tires there is a minimum in air pressure below which you cannot go without it costing you money. Drive in to 432 E. Mound-st and learn authentically what pressure you should carry. And let us inspect your tires. We may find a nail or a piece of glass. In the case of the latter it will keep going in until it cuts through every layer of fabric and then the tube.

THE SAFETY OF YOUR HOME IS MEASURED BY THE SAFETY OF YOUR TOWN

Your own carefulness in safeguarding home, factory, store or other property against fire is a solemn duty, but it is not enough.

No matter how careful you may be, a bad condition in adjacent or even distant property may undo all your own efforts. Cities must be made safer. It is a civic as well as a personal obligation.

Here is where the Stock Fire Insurance companies—constituting the National Board of Fire Underwriters—have rendered a conspicuous service. Their skilled engineers work unceasingly to make American cities safer.

These engineers have systematically surveyed more than 400 cities, many of them several times. The improvements in water supply, fire alarm systems, fire departments and safety ordinances made by the several municipalities upon the recommendations of these engineers have been of great public benefit and a decided factor in the consistent rate reductions shown by Stock Fire Insurance.

New hazards, growing out of new inventions and processes, call for prompt engineering treatment. These engineers are always on the alert to provide the necessary measures.

	Hearts — A, Q, 9, 3 Clubs — none Diamonds — A, Q, 7, 6, 4 Spades — A, K, Q, 4

No score, rubber game. What should Z, as dealer, bid with the foregoing hand? According to the theory set forth in the previous article, one diamond is the correct bid. In this particular hand a no trump bid, with a missing club suit, would be very unsound. But there is also the choice of a spade or a heart bid, even though each suit is one of four cards. The objection to either of these bids, however, is that partner is very apt to leave in a major suit bid.

On the other hand, the bid of a diamond with this hand is almost certain to produce further bidding. If A passes, Y should bid one heart and Y Z will make a grand slam. If Z should bid one spade, many players would pass and let Z play the hand. Y should, of course, bid two hearts over a spade bid and, if he did, the result would be the same. Note the play of the hand at spades. The only way Z can make game at spades, with a club opening, is to discard diamonds on the first three rounds of clubs. If he makes the mistake of trumping one club trick, he cannot make game. This shows the value of bidding the longer of two suits.

Problem No. 15

	Hearts — none Clubs — 6, 5 Diamonds — 7, 4 Spades — 9, 7, 6, 3
Hearts — K Clubs — K, Q, J Diamonds — Q, J, 10, 9 Spades — none	Y A B Z	Hearts — Q, 6, 5, 4 Clubs — 10, 7 Diamonds — 8, 3 Spades — none
	Hearts — A, 10, 7, 3 Clubs — A, 4 Diamonds — K, 5 Spades — none

Spades are trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y Z win all the tricks against any defense? Solution in the next article.

Weeds and Hay Fever

Government authorities have found that the common ragweed is to be found in some parts of Colorado. The great ragweed is also found in a few sections of the Pacific and Mountain states. The western ragweed is so common in some parts of California that it is an important factor in hay fever in that state. The most important hay-fever weeds of the Pacific and Mountain states are the wormwoods.

BABY NOT GAINING? LOOK TO HIS DIGESTION

Babies can't gain when souring waste in a clogged digestive tract is forming gas, making them colicky, constipated and miserable. Just try the method doctors endorse, and millions of mothers know, and see how your baby improves. A few drops of purely-vegetable, harmless Fletcher's Castoria makes the most fretful, feverish baby or child comfortable in a jiffy. A few doses and he's digesting perfectly and gaining as he should. To get genuine Castoria, look for the Fletcher signature on the wrapper.

Gordon Says Cars Should Be Carefully Inspected After Summer's Work.

"After the automobile has taken us over the highways for our summer tours, it is ready for quite a bit of attention," states Ben Gordon of Gordon Tire & Accessory Co., local Dayton Thorobred tire distributors. "Most likely it isn't the same car that left the garage before the trip. It's dusty and grimy. The engine knocks a little. The riding is hard. The motor sputters and misses.

"This is to be expected after a car has been driven at a fast speed, hour after hour and day after day. On the average, the modern motor, though greatly improved, will not stand such grueiling work without ill effects. Therefore, when it is put under a strain it requires tuning up in order to maintain its efficiency and lengthen its life.

"First comes the engine. The carbon should be removed and it may be necessary to have the valves ground in order that they seat themselves properly, giving maximum power. The spark plugs should be cleaned and the breaker points in the distributor scraped to be sure of good contact in the ignition.

"The cylinder head should be tightened down and the fan belt tightened. The carburetor might need adjustment. The battery most likely needs filling and the terminals cleaned.

"Then the tires should be inflated to proper pressure. Though your tires be low air pressure tires there is a minimum in air pressure below which you cannot go without it costing you money. Drive in to 432 E. Mound-st and learn authentically what pressure you should carry. And let us inspect your tires. We may find a nail or a piece of glass. In the case of the latter it will keep going in until it cuts through every layer of fabric and then the tube.

THE SAFETY OF YOUR HOME IS MEASURED BY THE SAFETY OF YOUR TOWN

Your own carefulness in safeguarding home, factory, store or other property against fire is a solemn duty, but it is not enough.

No matter how careful you may be, a bad condition in adjacent or even distant property may undo all your own efforts. Cities must be made safer. It is a civic as well as a personal obligation.

Here is where the Stock Fire Insurance companies—constituting the National Board of Fire Underwriters—have rendered a conspicuous service. Their skilled engineers work unceasingly to make American cities safer.

These engineers have systematically surveyed more than 400 cities, many of them several times. The improvements in water supply, fire alarm systems, fire departments and safety ordinances made by the several municipalities upon the recommendations of these engineers have been of great public benefit and a decided factor in the consistent rate reductions shown by Stock Fire Insurance.

New hazards, growing out of new inventions and processes, call for prompt engineering treatment. These engineers are always on the alert to provide the necessary measures.

This service is free to all cities, as well as to individual property owners, architects, contractors and builders through the National Board or the territorial board or Bureau of the Stock Fire Insurance Companies. Your own Insurance agent can give you information regarding this service. Inquiries are invited.

BIBLE THOUGHT

THE GREAT CHORUS— Sing, O heavens; and be joyful, O earth; and break forth into singing, O mountains; for the Lord hath comforted his people, and will have mercy upon his afflicted. —Isa. 49:13.

PRAYER — O Lord, we hear Thee saying: Comfort ye, comfort ye my people.

THE PARIS PACT

War is outlawed. The signing of the multilateral treaty has opened the way for a new understanding of peace in the world. In the conception of the idea and in the prophetic support by many of our bravest men, a new day has dawned in the life of the nations. Thought is a factor in changing the face of the earth greater than all the armies of all the nations in the world. If there is hesitation to confirm the treaty in the United States Senate, as had been intimated ,the senators will be traitors to the highest good and the blood of the battlefields will cry out against them. If the Paris pact means anything it must mean that armaments have gone to their limit and henceforth we must talk in terms of reduction. The churches of the nations must so ring with the endorsement of the outlawry of war that there shall be a conscience around the world to think in terms of the new standard for the adjustment of international disputes. The reality of all this is dependent upon the conscience of the world.

BETTER THAN CURE

A smoldering cigarette butt, a match dropped into a waste-paper basket, an iron left heating on the board, a discarded pile of dirty greasy rubbish, or endless other such petty risks caused by carelessness, may be the means of transforming a home or factory or office building into a smoaking ruin.

A large majority of homes have fire hazards that can be removed with a small amount of work or at a slight cost. Poor wiring carelessly handled heating and electrical devices and collections of rubbish are amoung the most common risks and account for many serious conflagrations. The danger lies in these everyday risks being overlooked or disregarded.

Fire is practically preventable. Athoratative estimates state that 80 per cent of all fires result from carelessness or ignorance. With a little caution and understanding of possible hazzards, homes and buildings can be protected. Preventing fire is better than trying to repair damage.

FINE TIME FOR ADVERTISING

The American people are going to spend an enormous amount of money between this date and the Christmas holiday. Holiday buying has already begun, and will keep on more and more each week. There is more money in circulation than ever before, and it is looking for the best bargains.

In addition to the holiday goods people are buying freely of winter clothing and fixing up their homes with new things for the winter.

All this new business will go largely to the concerns that advertise. The people are reading the newspaper ads to see which merchants offer the most attractive inducements. Those that advertise adequately seem like enterprising folks, and the curiosity of the people is aroused to come to these places and inspect the various articles they describe in their notices. A very great deal of this business can be pulled to any concern that reaches out after it by advertising.

THE BOY GANGS.

In most cities and towns, you can find certain haunts where groups of boys congregate after school and in the evenings. Often at this time they are playing football, which is all to the good. But ofter their heads are together, and one can only guess what they are putting up among themselves.

The more studious and industrious boys are apt to be studying and working, so that the gang crowd may consist largely of boys who are not so interested in getting their lessons and earning money. The parents need to watch the boy gangs here in Circleville and find out what is going on under the surface in those active minds. There may be things doing that need attention.

OLD STUFF.

It was an ancient gaffer
And he looked me in the eye,
"Oh, sir," sezze, "how can you tell
That winter time is nigh?"

"Indeed I know that once the birds
Departed with the fall,
But here in town one does not see
Then little birds at all.

"And once we missed the violets
Of which the poets rave,
But you don't see no pretty flowers
A-growing on the pave.

"And once the way the maidens dressed
Gave winter's message clear,
But now gals dress like summer time
Throughout the dad-burned year.

"So then I ask, kind sir, and wish
That you would tell the same—
How is it that you know so well
That winter time has came;"

"Oh, sir," sezz I, "but calm yourself
And rest your ancient brain,
For winter comes when sauer kraut and
The oysters bloom again."

"To induce the canary to take a bath," earnestly advises the Home page, "sprinkle a few seeds on the water." Now that this is settled let's go ahead with Christmas plans.

Before you eat a dinner of stuffed goose and escalloped oysters, and mashed potatoes and sweet potatoes, and cream gravy and slaw and sauer kraut and fried chicken and dried corn and French peas and mince pie and such—before you eat it, at least have the decency to hide the fact that you are dieting.

I never pass a pumpkin field
Beneath an autumn sky
But that I drop a bitter tear
And heave a hearthfelt sigh
And think these golden pumpkins will
Be made up into pie.

And this is the grief that shatters me
The wormwood and the gall,
I think of all the pumpkin pies
That will be made this fall
And sob aloud because, because
I cannot eat them all.

Peaks of Desire

by Kane O Day

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

JERRY DUNN, star reporter on a large newspaper, covers a garden fete given by Spencer Hayden, a millionaire. There he meets Ann Tremaine, debutante daughter of a wealthy banker, who is engaged to marry Hector Richards, whom she does not love. She becomes interested in Dunn, who is different from the men she has always known, and when he asks her to direct him to Mr. Hayden, she pretends she is a stranger and does not belong there. She tells him she is a working girl and has crashed the party, and he invites her to a speakeasy.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER III.

JERRY DUNN was surprised to find her laughing at him softly.

"You are amusing," she bantered him. "Do you wild reporters make a habit of luring stenographers off to speakeasies?"

"It's a respectable place and it's got the best protection in town," Jerry protested, his pride ruffled. "Furthermore, you needn't think I want to shoot a few drinks into you and then make you a proposition. I never make propositions to young ladies during business hours—and I'm working tonight."

"What's the good of going to a speakeasy if a girl can't depend on the customary proposition?" she asked with a tinge of sophistication that was a bit beyond her usual speed. "Besides, I've been in one or two speakeasies with friends and they seemed awfully grubby and uninteresting with the usual carbolic brands of liquor."

"The place I mean is run by a German and serves the best beer in town," he mourned. "However—I'm a two-idea man. We'll get a taxi and ride up a ten dollar bill."

"Object, necking?"

He looked at her and shook his head sorrowfully. "Just because you're young and good looking, do you have to be so damn modern?" he asked. "Listen—when I get fresh with you, you won't be in any doubt about it. Can't you assume—just for once—that a guy might be fed up on the eternal feminine sex appeal?"

"Are you?"

"I think I might manage to resist your charms for quite a while," he said brutally.

"What is it that attracts you, then—my mind?"

"Your mind, if any, is an unknown quality to me," he told her. "No, I'm just a bit lonesome and bored and there's something about you—just something about you that interests me. I don't know what, or why."

"Perhaps," she mocked, "it's love at first sight?"

"Don't try to be clever." His eyes were upon her shrewdly and, despite the lightness of her mood, she had an uneasy sensation that he could and would say things that would make her feel serious, in spite of herself. "You're not clever, really," he went on. "This is a wise-cracking age and you're just trying to keep in step. At a rough guess, I'd say your line ought to be idealism—the noble soul stuff. But that can wait—where do you want to go from here?"

The moon, a stringed orchestra that was beginning softly, distantly in the grounds, worked a magic, unexpected effect upon Ann. She shivered with an uprush of hurt from her heart—not because of what Jerry Dunn had said . . . because she was sorry for herself . . . because she, too, was fed up with something, she didn't know what . . . because she was going to marry Hector Richards and she didn't love him. Marriage would swamp her, swallow her up and there would be nothing more lurking adventurously ahead in life . . . no more moonlight and music and permeating sweetness of roses.

"We're standing here wasting time," Jerry Dunn said.

"Perhaps," she mocked, "it's love at first sight."

It was almost ended now . . . her girlhood. In a matter of months—weeks—it would be all over. Her chance to live and breathe with her soul . . . to stretch out her spirit and be the real person that was hidden underneath her training and money and social position. This might be her last time to stand alone, free and untrammeled, and talk with a man that was different. . . .

"Where are we going to go?" Jerry persisted.

A mist came into her eyes. "To hell, I suppose," she said. She didn't speak the words voluntarily—they just came out.

He looked at her, his reporter's eyes galvanizing instantly.

"Here—you wait over here."

He led her under a tree where branches brushed their cheeks and the night was dusky with shadows; there was a rustic bench and a tangle of flowers that were sleeping in the night, their breath perfumed strange and sweet.

"You wait here while I dig up some of the Haydens and get the notes on my story," he said softly. "I'll be back after a while and I'll find you right here where I left you, won't I?"

"Yes."

"Good girl!"

He was gone and in his absence Ann felt that she had made an utter fool of herself. Why had she been swept away by such a tide of heartbreak? It was humiliating to know that she had revealed it to a stranger, that she had been unable to control herself . . . like a lady . . . he would think she was cheap, common . . . that she wore her heart on her sleeve . . .

Pride came to her rescue and she began to feel better, even though there was still a ghostlike unhappiness upon her. It had all come over her so suddenly, almost a swooning realization that she was trapped by her own life, by her family and friends and the love and desire of Hector Richardson. Steeped in the whole fluid of social life she had uttered one despairing cry before she went under . . . and there had been someone, a stranger, a man who had risen up out of nowhere to hear her cry!

Before she thought it possible he had returned.

"Come on — we'll get out of here now."

She didn't ask him where he was going to take her. It didn't matter. A vague prompting of conscience told her she shouldn't be slipping away from Hector Richardson; he'd be worried about her. He was a nice boy . . . it was a harsh, ungracious trick to slip away from him like this.

She knew though, in her heart, that she didn't care; Hector's immediate feelings were entirely trivial compared with the strange churning in her heart.

Jerry Dunn stood before her as she arose; she slipped her hand through his arm and let herself be taken away.

BIBLE THOUGHT

THE GREAT CHORUS— Sing, O heavens; and be joyful, O earth; and break forth into singing, O mountains; for the Lord hath comforted his people, and will have mercy upon his afflicted. —Isa. 49:13.

PRAYER. — O Lord, we hear Thee saying: Comfort ye, comfort ye my people.

THE PARIS PACT

War is outlawed. The signing of the multilateral treaty has opened the way for a new understanding of peace in the world. In the conception of the idea and in the prophetic support by many of our bravest men, a new day has dawned in the life of the nations. Thought is a factor in changing the face of the earth greater than all the armies of all the nations in the world. If there is hesitation to confirm the treaty in the United States Senate, as had been intimated, the senators will be traitors to the highest good and the blood of the battlefields will cry out against them. If the Paris pact means anything it must mean that armaments have gone to their limit and henceforth we must talk in terms of reduction. The churches of the nations must so ring with the endorsement of the outlawry of war that there shall be a conscience around the world to think in terms of the new standard for the adjustment of international disputes. The reality of all this is dependent upon the conscience of the world.

BETTER THAN CURE

A smoldering cigarette butt, a match dropped into a waste-paper basket; an iron left heating on the board, a discarded pile of dirty greasy rubbish, or endless other such petty risks caused by carelessness, may be the means of transforming a home or factory or office building into a smoaking ruin.

A large majority of homes have fire hazards that can be removed with a small amount of work or at a slight cost. Poor wiring carelessly handled heating and electrical devices and collections of rubbish are amoung the most common risks and account for many serious conflagrations. The danger lies in these everyday risks being overlooked or disregarded.

Fire is practically preventable. Athoratative estimates state that 80 per cent of all fires result from carelessness or ignorance. With a little caution and understanding of possible hazzards, homes and buildings can be protected. Preventing fire is better than trying to repair damage.

FINE TIME FOR ADVERTISING

The American people are going to spend an enormous amount of money between this date and the Christmas holiday. Holiday buying has already begun, and will keep on more and more each week. There is more money in circulation than ever before, and it is looking for the best bargains.

In addition to the holiday goods people are buying freely of winter clothing and fixing up their homes with new things for the winter.

All this new business will go largely to the concerns that advertise. The people are reading the newspaper ads to see which merchants offer the most attractive inducements. Those that advertise adequately seem like enterprising folks, and the curiosity of the people is aroused to come to these places and inspect the various articles they describe in their notices. A very great deal of this business can be pulled to any concern that reaches out after it by advertising.

THE BOY GANGS.

In most cities and towns, you can find certain haunts where groups of boys congregate after school and in the evenings. Often at this time they are playing football, which is all to the good. But after their heads are together, and one can only guess what they are putting up among themselves.

The more studious and industrious boys are apt to be studying and working, so that the gang crowd may consist largely of boys who are not so interested in getting their lessons and earning money. The parents need to watch the boy gangs here in Circleville and find out what is going on under the surface in those active minds. There may be things doing that need attention

CABBAGES and KINGS

"The time has come," the Walrus said,
"To talk of many things:
Of shoes—and ships—and sealing-wax—
And cabbages—and kings—"

OLD STUFF.

It was an ancient gaffer
And he looked me in the eye,
"Oh, sir," sezze, "how can you tell
That winter time is nigh?"

"Indeed I know that once the birds
Departed with the fall,
But here in town one does not see
Then little birds at all.

"And once we missed the violets
Of which the poets rave,
But you don't see no pretty flowers
A-growing on the pave.

"And once the way the maidens dressed
Gave winter's message clear,
But now gals dress like summer time
Throughout the dad-burned year

"So then I ask, kind sir, and wish
That you would tell the same—
How is it that you know so well
That winter time has came;"

"Oh, sir," sezz I, "but calm yourself
And rest your ancient brain,
For winter comes when sauer kraut and
The oysters bloom again"

"To induce the canary to take a bath," earnestly advises the Home page, "sprinkle a few seeds on the water." Now that this is settled let's go ahead with Christmas plans.

Before you eat a dinner of stuffed goose and escalloped oysters, and mashed potatoes and sweet potatoes, and cream gravy and slaw and sauer kraut and fried chicken and dried corn and French peas and mince pie and such—before you eat it, at least have the decency to hide the fact that you are dieting.

I never pass a pumpkin field
Beneath an autumn sky
But that I drop a bitter tear
And heave a hearthfelt sigh
And think these golden pumpkins will
Be made up into pie.

And this is the grief that shatters me
The wormwood and the gall,
I think of all the pumpkin pies
That will be made this fall
And sob aloud because, because
I cannot eat them all.

"My son," said the old codger, "is a pretty fair young feller, as young fellers go nowadays, but he treats a dollar like my daughter does her new southern accent—always looking for a chance to use it.

What are the young ones coming to! Now comes the report from an exchange that an 85 year old grandmother has bobbed her hair, lengthened her heels, shortened her skirts and purchased a cigarette holder. She is out, she candidly admits, to find a satisfactory mate to share her declining years. At last reports she has taken the family album down to the photographers to put the old folks through a face lifting course.

Peaks of Desire

by Kane O Day

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

JERRY DUNN, star reporter on a large newspaper, covers a garden fete given by Spencer Hayden, a millionaire. There he meets Ann Tremaine, debutante daughter of a wealthy banker, who is engaged to marry Hector Richards, whom she does not love. She becomes interested in Dunn, who is different from the men she has always known, and when he asks her to direct him to Mr. Hayden, she pretends she is a stranger and does not belong there. She tells him she is a working girl and has crashed the party, and he invites her to a speakeasy.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER III.

JERRY DUNN was surprised to find her laughing at him softly.

"You are amusing," she bantered him. "Do you wild reporters make a habit of luring stenographers off to speakeasies?"

"It's a respectable place and it's got the best protection in town," Jerry protested, his pride ruffled. "Furthermore, you needn't think I want to shoot a few drinks into you and then make you a proposition. I never make propositions to young ladies during business hours—and I'm working tonight."

"What's the good of going to a speakeasy if a girl can't depend on the customary proposition?" she asked with a tinge of sophistication that was a bit beyond her usual speed. "Besides, I've been in one or two speakeasies with friends and they seemed awfully grubby and uninteresting with the usual carbolic brands of liquor."

"The place I mean is run by a German and serves the best beer in town," he mourned. "However—I'm a two-idea man. We'll get a taxi and ride up a ten dollar bill."

"Object, necking?"

He looked at her and shook his head sorrowfully. "Just because you're young and good looking, do you have to be so damn modern?" he asked. "Listen—when I get fresh with you, you won't be in any doubt about it. Can't you assume—just for once—that a guy might be fed up on the eternal feminine sex appeal?"

"Are you?"

"I think I might manage to resist your charms for quite a while," he said brutally.

"What is it that attracts you, then—my mind?"

"Your mind, if any, is an unknown quality to me," he told her. "No, I'm just a bit lonesome and bored and there's something about you—just something about you that interests me. I don't know what, or why."

"Perhaps," she mocked, "it's love at first sight!"

"Don't try to be clever." His eyes were upon her shrewdly and, despite the lightness of her mood, she had an uneasy sensation that he could and would say things that would make her feel serious, in spite of herself. "You're not clever, really," he went on. "This is a wise-cracking age and you're just trying to keep in step. At a rough guess, I'd say your line ought to be idealism—the noble soul stuff. But that can wait—where do you want to go from here?"

The moon, a strong orchestra that was beginning softly, distantly in the grounds, worked a magic, unexpected effect upon Ann. She shivered with an uprush of hurt from her heart—not because of what Jerry Dunn had said . . . because she was sorry for herself . . . because she, too, was fed up with something, she didn't know what—because she was going to marry Hector Richards and she didn't love him. Marriage would swamp her, swallow her up and there would be nothing more lurking adventurously ahead in life . . . no more moonlight and music and permeating sweetness of roses.

"We're standing here wasting time," Jerry Dunn said.

"I'll be back after a while and I'll find you right here where I left you, won't I?"

"Yes."

"Good girl!"

He was gone and in his absence Ann felt that she had made an utter fool of herself. Why had she been swept away by such a tide of heartbreak? It was humiliating to know that she had revealed it to a stranger, that she had been unable to control herself . . . like a lady . . . he would think she was cheap, common . . . that she wore her heart on her sleeve . . .

Pride came to her rescue and she began to feel better, even though there was still a ghostlike unhappiness upon her. It had all come over her so suddenly, almost a swooning realization that she was trapped by her own life, by her family and friends and the love and desire of Hecto. Richardson. Steeped in the whole fluid of social life she had uttered one despairing cry before she went under . . . and there had been someone, a stranger, a man who had risen up out of nowhere to hear her cry!

Before she thought it possible he had returned.

"Come on — we'll get out of here now."

She didn't ask him where he was going to take her. It didn't matter. A vague prompting of conscience told her she shouldn't be slipping away from Hector Richardson; he'd be worried about her. He was a nice boy . . . it was a harsh, ungracious trick to slip away from him like this.

She knew though, in her heart, that she didn't care; Hector's immediate feelings were entirely trivial compared with the strange churning in her heart.

Jerry Dunn stood before her as she arose; she slipped her hand through his arm and let herself be taken away.

"Perhaps," she mocked, "it's love at first sight."

It was almost ended now . . . her girlhood. In a matter of months—weeks—it would be all over. Her chance to live and breathe with her soul . . . to stretch out her spirit and be the real person that was hidden underneath her training and money and social position. This might be her last time to stand alone, free and untrammeled, and talk with a man that was different . . .

"Where are we going to go?" Jerry persisted.

A mist came into her eyes. "To hell, I suppose," she said. She didn't speak the words voluntarily—they just came out.

He looked at her, his reporter's eyes galvanizing instantly.

"Here—you want to go here."

He led her under a tree where branches brushed their cheeks and the night was dusky with shadows; there was a rustic bench and a couple of flowers that were sleeping in the night, their breath perfumed strange and sweet.

"You wait here while I dig up some of the Haydens and get the notes on my story," he said softly.

THEATRE

"HIGH SCHOOL HERO"

Sally Phipps and Johnny Arthur are starred at the Grand theater tonight in "The High School Hero."

This picture is a clever comedy-drama of two loveable kids, sweet-sixteen, in the good old high-school days. An added feature is Fox News.

INSIDE STORY OF FILM

King Vidor, who scored his big success with "The Big Parade" and followed that by "The Crowd," has achieved an entirely different type of picture, although a very interesting one, with "The People," now playing at the Metropolitan.

The picture, which co-stars Marion Davies and William Haines, is a highly humorous inside story of the making of a screen star in Hollywood and has given the members of the motion picture colony, many of whom gave their time and services, "atmosphere" in the production, many a laugh. The story is original.

"SHOW GIRL" IS NEXT

The modern greeting card salesman comes into his own at last in "Show Girl," a First National picture coming to the Cliftona theater Tuesday with Alice White in the title role.

Many men write mottoes for a living. J. P. McEvoy, author of "Show Girl," was one of the experts in this line and may still occasionally dash off a verse or two for some special occasion.

In the story he pictured a young man, one of Dixie Dugan's lovers, who exuded mottoes and who had a card for every occasion. He fails to win the girl by such means, Charles Delaney as Jack Haines being the successful one.

DISCUSS PROBLEMS AT CLUB CONGRESS

Plenty of Entertainment Mixed With Business At Four-H Convention.

The boys and girls attending the 14th annual Ohio 4-H club congress, gathered in University hall Monday evening to sing, cheer and get acquainted. Four hundred and thirty-one boys and girls are attending the congress.

This year there are representatives of 82 of Ohio's 88 counties in attendance. Pickaway-co is represented at the club congress by four delegates. The entire floor of the Neil house has been reserved as headquarters and a trained nurse has been hired to take care of any cases of illness that may arise during the congress.

Following the invocation by Rev. John H. O'Neill, pastor of the Holy Name church, the boys and girls, were led through a series of songs, and numbers by boys' and girls' quartets.

A Highland pipe band and a feature dancer then entertained the group.

Discussion of club problems will be carried on throughout Tuesday. A sight-seeing trip around the campus is also scheduled.

CITY PLANS END TO RIVER'S POLLUTION

The city council of Columbus, Monday night, took steps to improve the sewerage system of that city and to stop the pollution of the Scioto and Olentangy rivers and Alum creek as ordered last year by the state board of health.

The council instructed President Wehe and Clerk Howard Wilkins to take the necessary steps for obtaining authority from the city to issue $3,000,000 in bonds for these improvements. This is to be done with out the approval of the voters.

The sewerage drainage system now planned will take care of the needs of the city of Columbus up to 1960, it is said.

cleanse the system of poisons

Two of the great enemies to youth and vitality are delayed elimination and intestinal poisons. To keep yourself free from both these common difficulties will help you to stay young.

With the use of Nujol you can do it too. For Nujol absorbs body poisons and carries them off, preventing their absorption by the body. Nujol also softens the waste matter and brings about normal evacuation. It is harmless; contains no drugs or medicine. It won't cause gas or griping pains, or affect the stomach or kidneys. Every corner druggist has Nujol. Make sure you get the genuine. Look for the Nujol bottle with the label on the back that you can read right through the bottle. Don't delay, get Nujol today.

RAILROADS APPEAL FREIGHT RATE CUT

Railroads have carried both of the recently announced reductions in freight rates on farm commodities to the courts, is the word received by the Pickaway County Farm Bureau from C. S. Long, traffic manager of the Ohio Farm bureau. The fertilizer freight rate, which means an annual saving of about $300,000 to Ohio farmers, is already in effect and the reduced rates are being used even though the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission is being questioned by the carriers in court proceedings.

The recently announced reduction of 12 percent in freight rates on livestock moving interstate, has also been taken by the carriers to the court, but the rates in this case, too, are already in effect.

RECEIVES SENTENCE

Lloyd Crable, Circleville, who was indicted by the October grand jury on a charge of grand larceny, pleaded guilty Saturday to a charge of petit larceny and was given a sentence of 30 days in the county jail and fined $50 and costs by Judge Clarence Curtain.

Crable was arrested for the theft of a large canvas, the property of J. D. Newton. The canvas was appraised at more than $35 but was later reappraised and valued at about $25, changing the charge from grand larceny to petit larceny.

The canvas was used by Newton for covering a threshing machine.

DISCUSS PROBLEMS AT CLUB CONGRESS

Plenty of Entertainment Mixed With Business At Four-H Convention.

The boys and girls attending the 14th annual Ohio 4-H club congress, gathered in University hall Monday evening to sing, cheer and get acquainted. Four hundred and thirty-one boys and girls are attending the congress.

This year there are representatives of 82 of Ohio's 88 counties in attendance. Pickaway-co is represented at the club congress by four delegates. The entire floor of the Neil house has been reserved as headquarters and a trained nurse has been hired to take care of any cases of illness that may arise during the congress.

Following the invocation by Rev. John H. O'Neill, pastor of the Holy Name church, the boys and girls, were led through a series of songs, and numbers by boys' and girls' quartets.

A Highland pipe band and a feature dancer then entertained the group.

Discussion of club problems will be carried on throughout Tuesday. A sight-seeing trip around the campus is also scheduled.

CITY PLANS END TO RIVER'S POLLUTION

The city council of Columbus, Monday night, took steps to improve the sewerage system of that city and to stop the pollution of the Scioto and Olentangy rivers and Alum creek as ordered last year by the state board of health.

The council instructed President Wehe and Clerk Howard Wilkins to take the necessary steps for obtaining authority from the city to issue $3,000,000 in bonds for these improvements. This is to be done with out the approval of the voters.

The sewerage drainage system now planned will take care of the needs of the city of Columbus up to 1960, it is said.

Keep youth longer!

cleanse the system of poisons

Two of the great enemies to youth and vitality are delayed elimination and intestinal poisons. To keep yourself free from both these common difficulties will help you to stay young.

With the use of Nujol you can do it too. For Nujol absorbs body poisons and carries them off, preventing their absorption by the body. Nujol also softens the waste matter and brings about normal evacuation. It is harmless; contains no drugs or medicine. It won't cause gas or griping pains, or affect the stomach or kidneys. Every corner druggist has Nujol. Make sure you get the genuine. Look for the Nujol bottle with the label on the back that you can read right through the bottle. Don't delay, get Nujol today.

RAILROADS APPEAL FREIGHT RATE CUT

Railroads have carried both of the recently announced reductions in freight rates on farm commodities to the courts, is the word received by the Pickaway County Farm Bureau from C. S. Long, traffic manager of the Ohio Farm bureau. The fertilizer freight rate, which means an annual saving of about $300,000 to Ohio farmers, is already in effect and the reduced rates are being used even though the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission is being questioned by the carriers in court proceedings.

The recently announced reduction of 12 percent in freight rates on livestock moving interstate, has also been taken by the carriers to the court, but the rates in this case, too, are already in effect.

RECEIVES SENTENCE

Lloyd Crable, Circleville, who was indicted by the October grand jury on a charge of grand larceny, pleaded guilty Saturday to a charge of petit larceny and was given a sentence of 30 days in the county jail and fined $50 and costs by Judge Clarence Curtain.

Crable was arrested for the theft of a large canvas, the property of J. D. Newton. The canvas was appraised at more than $35 but was later reappraised and valued at about $25, changing the charge from grand larceny to petit larceny.

The canvas was used by Newton for covering a threshing machine.

MONDAY CLUB IS REPRESENTED AT ANNUAL MEETING

A number of members of the Monday club of Circleville accepted the invitation of the Lancaster Federation of Women's clubs, for Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 20 and 21, to the annual conference of the Southeast district.

At this meeting all clubs and federations were to give a report of their work of the past year, and their plans for the future. All sessions were to be held in St. Peter's Lutheran church, corner of Broad and Mulberry-sts.

A splendid program of varied interests was begun Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock with assembly singing, conducted by Miss Florence Hawkins of Wellston. The invocation was by Dr. Joseph Sittler, and was followed by a welcoming address by the mayor. Mr. R. U. Hastings. Mrs. J. H. Morrow of Wellston, responded to this greeting, preceding a group of vocal solos sung by Mrs. George A. Butterworth of Lancaster.

The president of the Southeast district, Mrs. William N. Harder, made an address, and the program for the afternoon proceeded. It included many interesting discussions of such subjects as Law Observance, Child Welfare, Ohio Histories and Publicity. At 6:30 o'clock the Daughters of the American Revolution held a reception at the Elks' Home, and there was also a banquet at the church at this time.

A very pleasing musical program followed the banquet, with beautiful selections on the organ by Mrs. Frank Smith, and vocal and violin solos. There was also an address by Mrs. Robert Morris of Toledo.

On Wednesday the sessions will begin at 8:30 o'clock. One of the important speakers at this time will be Mrs. E. F. Anderson of Circleville, whose subject will be "Public Instruction."

Other addresses will be on Community Service, Junior Membership, Family Finance, Art, Literature and Drama, and Home Making.

After luncheon at 1:00 o'clock at Maple-st Evangelical church, everyone at the conference, who wishes to do so will join in a motor trip to the Wagenall's Memorial at Lithopolis, where there will be an organ recital and the continuation of the program.

Those attending the conference from Circleville on Tuesday and remaining for the banquet were the delegates Mrs E. F. Anderson and Mrs. Clark Will, and the alternates Mrs. Charles Gerhardt and Mrs. Harry Heffner and the following Monday club members; Mrs. A. L. Wilder, Mrs. C. E. Groce, Mrs. Harry Lewis, Mrs. Charles Lewis, Miss Grace Moody, Miss Sadie Brunner, Miss Elizabeth Renick, Mrs. G. G. Leist, Mrs. Fred Griner, Mrs. James Moffitt, Miss Carrie Johnson, Mrs. Paul Johnson, Mrs. H. M. Crites, Mrs. George Haswell, Mrs. William Ulm, Mrs. John Bennett and Mrs. Howard Jones.

Some of these and another group of members will attend the sessions on Wednesday.

PROFESSOR GRAVES ADDRESSES CLUB.

One of the most delightful of recent meetings of the Monday club was the meeting Monday night at which Professor William L. Graves of Columbus, was the speaker. Professor Graves, who is the head of the English department at Ohio State university, had been invited here to speak, when the club's annual program for the evening concerned modern literature. When Professor Graves was procured to speak on this subject, the entire evening was turned over to him.

In Columbus he is the most popular speaker in literary circles and whenever he consents to take part in a club program it is a real occasion, and so it was that the Circleville Monday club felt honored and very grateful for his presence here Monday night. As always, the moment he started to talk his personality and wealth of knowledge dominated his audience.

The address dealt with change in the modern literature from that of the literature of perhaps 20 years ago. In his inimitable manner he told of his own experiences in reading several of the latest novels, and his own reaction to them. His entire address was filled with his customary wit and humor.

In dealing with the latest literature he said that for the most part the theme of the modern story was lost in the personalities of its characters, and he gave a number of examples of this in popular and recent novels. Especially he spoke of English writers with whom most of his audience were familiar. He also said that the trend of the late literature toward biology and psychology was perhaps the result of the marvels in recent scientific developments.

He also read a very short and pleasing story of Katherine Mansfield to further emphasize some of his ideas.

He also spoke of stories with morals as being entirely out of date, and went back to the days when these were in vogue.

Professor Graves is a writer himself, and not only understands the modern literary situation himself, but proved Monday night that there are many different angles from which it should be judged. Although he spoke for a long time, and in his usual hurried manner, he left the impression with his hearers that there was still a great deal of the subject that he had not touched.

EMOTIONS UPHELD IN WHEELAND TALK

Evangelist Delivers Stirring Sermon at Presbyterian Church Monday.

Dr. Clyde R. Wheeland opened his sermon Monday night at the Presbyterian church with a defense of emotionalism, declaring that before the will can act the emotions must be stirred.

"There is nothing in the world so necessary as that our emotions should be stirred to their depths," he said. "Here was a woman with a physical weakness, trying to reach Jesus. 'If I can but touch the hem of His garment, I shall be made whole.' Beyond the ordinary lies the extraordinary. Poetry is only the beauty of life wearing its fine clothes.

"We are all looking for the land of beginning again. The cure of the lack in every life, the lack of love, the lack of light, the lack of the real things of living is not to be found in self but in a Divine power. This cure cannot be purchased. It must come from God. We all must take an inventory of our own lives if we would understand this woman's experience."

Her real lack was a lack of faith in Him who could cure. She started with a material thing. His garment. She needed the power, the friendliness of Jesus. The touch was only the vitual, not the cure. She was healed by Jesus. He is as real today. Bare your hearts. Get behind the song, the sermon and Jesus will do for us what He did for this woman.

"Though Jesus healed her bodily He did not stop there. A great danger men fall is in getting thrills. Jesus looked around, brought her out of the crowd, when she confessed real healing came.

"Today we are too sophisticated too intellectual (not too intelligent). We are blind yet we say we see.

"It is faith that is needed. We must walk with Him. We might be children of the living God if we would but touch Him. Only as we walk with God do we begin to know the real romance of living.

"Too many men and women come to the place where desire dies and then cannot get back. So many in the crowd pass Jesus but so few touch Him."

Tuesday Dr. Wheeland continues his service at 7:30 o'clock with the Bible study hour at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday and the regular evening service.

TAX ASSESSMENT PROTEST SUCCEEDS

Farm organizations of Butler county that gathered data and complained to the Ohio Tax Commission about their assessments for tax purposes, were rewarded for their efforts by an order reducing rural property valuation for tax purposes 15 percent, says an announcement carried in the Ohio Farm Bureau News, the official organ of the organization.

The recently granted order was based on figures gathered by a committee of farm bureau and grange in that county showing rural real estate on the duplicate above its comparative value with other real estate.

MONDAY CLUB IS REPRESENTED AT ANNUAL MEETING

A number of members of the Monday club of Circleville accepted the invitation of the Lancaster Federation of Women's clubs, for Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 20 and 21, to the annual conference of the Southeast district.

At this meeting all clubs and federations were to give a report of their work of the past year, and their plans for the future. All sessions were to be held in St Peter's Lutheran church, corner of Broad and Mulberry-sts.

A splendid program of varied interests was begun Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock with assembly singing, conducted by Miss Florence Hawkins of Wellston. The invocation was by Dr. Joseph Sittler, and was followed by a welcoming address by the mayor, Mr. R. U. Hastings. Mrs. J. H. Morrow of Wellston, responded to this greeting, preceding a group of vocal solos sung by Mrs. George A. Butterworth of Lancaster.

The president of the Southeast district, Mrs. William N. Harder, made an address, and the program for the afternoon proceeded. It included many interesting discussions of such subjects as Law Observance, Child Welfare, Ohio Histories and Publicity. At 6:30 o'clock the Daughters of the American Revolution held a reception at the Elks' Home, and there was also a banquet at the church at this time.

A very pleasing musical program followed the banquet, with beautiful selections on the organ by Mrs. Frank Smith, and vocal and violin solos. There was also an address by Mrs. Robert Morris of Toledo.

On Wednesday the sessions will begin at 8:30 o'clock One of the important speakers at this time will be Mrs. E. F. Anderson of Circleville, whose subject will be "Public Instruction."

Other addresses will be on Community Service, Junior Membership, Family Finance, Art, Literature and Drama, and Home Making.

After luncheon at 1:00 o'clock at Maple-st Evangelical church, everyone at the conference, who wishes to do so will join in a motor trip to the Wagenall's Memorial at Lithopolis, where there will be an organ recital and the continuation of the program.

Those attending the conference from Circleville on Tuesday and remaining for the banquet were the delegates Mrs E. F. Anderson and Mrs. Clark Will, and the alternates Mrs. Charles Gerhardt and Mrs. Harry Heffner and the following Monday club members; Mrs. A. L. Wilder, Mrs. C. E. Groce, Mrs. Harry Lewis, Mrs. Charles Lewis, Miss Grace Moody, Miss Sadie Brunner, Miss Elizabeth Renick, Mrs. G. G. Leist, Mrs. Fred Griner, Mrs. James Moffitt, Miss Carrie Johnson, Mrs. Paul Johnson, Mrs. H. M. Crites, Mrs. George Haswell, Mrs. William Ulm, Mrs. John Bennett and Mrs. Howard Jones.

Some of these and another group of members will attend the sessions on Wednesday.

PROFESSOR GRAVES ADDRESSES CLUB.

One of the most delightful of recent meetings of the Monday club was the meeting Monday night at which Professor William L Graves of Columbus, was the speaker. Professor Graves, who is the head of the English department at Ohio State university, had been invited here to speak, when the club's annual program for the evening concerned modern literature. When Professor Graves was procured to speak on this subject, the entire evening was turned over to him.

In Columbus he is the most popular speaker in literary circles and whenever he consents to take part in a club program it is a real occasion, and so it was that the Circleville Monday club felt honored and very grateful for his presence here Monday night. As always, the moment he started to talk his personality and wealth of knowledge dominated his audience.

The address dealt with change in the modern literature from that of the literature of perhaps 20 years ago. In his inimitable manner he told of his own experiences in reading several of the latest novels, and his own reaction to them. His entire address was filled with his customary wit and humor.

In dealing with the latest literature he said that for the most part the theme of the modern story was lost in the personalities of its characters, and he gave a number of examples of this in popular and recent novels. Especially he spoke of English writers with whom most of his audience were familiar. He also said that the trend of the late literature toward biology and psychology was perhaps the result of the marvels in recent scientific developments.

He also read a very short and pleasing story of Katherine Mansfield to further emphasize some of his ideas.

He also spoke of stories with morals as being entirely out of date, and went back to the days when these were in vogue.

Professor Graves is a writer himself, and not only understands the modern literary situation himself, but proved Monday night that there are many different angles from which it should be judged. Although he spoke for a long time, and in his usual hurried manner, he left the impression with his hearers that there was still a great deal of the subject that he had not touched.
